Palm Sunday – Some Musings

We enter a week of so many rich and moving rituals and liturgies. It's a week in which we're meant to do some serious reflection on the cost of our salvation. It's a week in which we're meant to reflect on the rituals of our faith and their meaning in our personal lives. Truly, it is a holy week. We will hear the story of our salvation history, of a Father's love for His often-errant children, of His steadfast commitment to the covenant He made from the beginning of time. We'll hear the story of His willingness to send His beloved and only Son to live among us and to die for us. We'll hear, in short, a love story. Like all good love stories, it has its good times and its bad times.

How we respond to that story is ours to decide. While it's true that Christ died for all of us, not all of us respond to that love. Some of us at one time or another have turned away from that great sacrifice of love and gone our own way. Sometimes we've returned, humbled and war weary, and at others we've stayed away a very long time, sometimes never to return. When I listen to the telling of Jesus' agony in the Garden of Gethsemane and of His tears and sweat becoming like blood, I realize that our turning away is in part responsible for that great agony.

We enter a week in which we'll hear stories of triumph and defeat, of gain and loss, of love and denial. For me, this week is one in which love is honed or dulled.

We will begin our Masses this weekend with the reading of Jesus and His triumphant entry into Jerusalem to the cheering of the crowds who shortly will call for the authorities to crucify Him. We hear how the disciples obtain the colt not asking any questions but trusting that the Master knows what He's about. And these same disciples will deny they know Him and abandon Him to die alone. How quickly the tide of public adulation changes! As I listen to these readings, I'm reminded of my own lack of fidelity, remembering how easy it can be to follow the wrong path, to join the jeering crowd, to turn from my love of God and neighbor.

Jesus will eat the Passover meal with His disciples and will make true His promise to be with us "until the end of the age" when we hear of His leaving us with His Body and Blood. He will do those rituals that the Jewish people have been doing since the time of Moses and the Exodus from Egypt. And He will become the paschal, unblemished lamb. It will be His blood that is smeared on the lintels of our hearts to preserve us from eternal separation from Him. It can be easy to forget the long history of our salvation which began after the disobedience of our first parents and would have continued had Jesus not acquiesced to the will of His Father.

Truly we are entering a holy week. Let's make good use of it! Let's do what we can to improve our prayer life, our worship, our charity, our love of one another and our God. Let's become the holy nation, the royal priesthood, the people He's set apart for His own. Let's live holy lives this Holy Week.

Wishing you a holy week full of many small miracles. Betty Bruch

Holy Week Reflection

In the Gospel of John Jesus says that He never does anything on His own, that He does everything with His Father and that His Father is always with Him. Christ came to earth, took on our nature and embraced suffering and death, so that we also could be united to Him and know for certain that we are never alone, no matter what. As we start holy week, Christ's passion, death and resurrection put us face to face with our own experience of suffering, loss and restoration. A Jesuit priest told me that passion death and resurrection are the natural rhythm of life. Think of a mother giving birth or the joy of a family meal after a long day at work. There is the toil, the self emptying and then the gladness. Sometimes there are seasons in our lives that are passion themed, other seasons are resurrection coloured. I believe that whether we are experiencing passion, death or resurrection, the more we unite ourselves to Christ through prayer and surrender to His will, the more we will experience the fruitfulness of the cross and the joy of his companionship. We adore you O Christ and we praise you for by your holy cross you have redeemed the world. Anna

PARISH ACTIVITIES

DEAR PARISHIONERS: Bishop Vila would like to meet you and have an opportunity for parishioners to come together with himself and Fr. Slawek. We would like to start having a "Bishop's Dinners" in which small groups of parishioners (past and present) can come and share a meal and have honest conversations that will help inform our perspectives, and ultimately help us to better minister to everyone in our community. Val Royle has agreed to help organize these dinners and ensure that we have a safe space for real conversations. Please contact her in confidence at royleval@yahoo.ca you are interested. Val will arrange the dinners for very small groups. This process will evolve as we move forward and learn what works best. Perhaps you know of people who have left our church community. Please let them know about this opportunity to share their views and to impact our Church, which is meant to be a loving instrument of Christ in our world. Please note the email address was incorrect the last few bulletins. I am sorry for any inconvenience this has caused. Sherry Kinney
