Psalm 145

I will bless your name for ever, my king and my God.

The Lord is gracious and merciful.

Slow to anger and abounding in steadfast love.
The Lord is good to all,
and his compassion is over all that he has made.

All your works shall give thanks to you, I Lord.
And all your faithful shall bless you.
They shall speak of the glory of your kingdom,
And tell of your power.

To make known to human beings your mighty deeds,
And the glorious splendour of your kingdom.
Your kingdom is an everlasting kingdom,
And your dominion endures throughout all generations.

If you cannot find Christ in the beggar, you will not find him in the chalice. – St John Chrysostom

MAY- MARIAN MONTH

The Litany of the Most Virgin Mary is to be recited every after mass during the whole month of May.

You must know that when you “hail” Mary she immediately greets you! Don’t think that she is one of those rude woman of whom there are so many - on the contrary, she is utterly courteous and pleasant. If you greet her, she will answer you right away and converse with you! St. Bernadine of Siena

Some Musings

The 5th Sunday of Easter – Some Musings

“Love one another”

It's time to put away our woolen sweaters and take out our lighter tops and bottoms. The sky has taken on that glorious blue that tells us spring is arriving in all its freshness. The willows behind me are almost in full leaf and that green is more vibrant with each passing day. One feels the rebirth of the world. It is a time of year when we can rejoice and be glad in each day just as Psalm 118 tells us. It seems that the earth is enjoying its new robes of green. The air coming through the open windows sweeps away the staleness of a home too long wrapped in the cold fingers of winter. Many people say “I love this time of year. There's that word – love! We bandy this word about until it loses its meaning.

In the English language there is only that one word, love. Unlike the Greeks, who have eight words to describe that term. So when Jesus tells us, His disciples, to love one another, He's talking about the kind of love the Greeks call agape. It's a word that means a love for all, whether they are close family members or others whom we do not know. It is often easier to love the improvised people of some Third World country but loving those who live in our own communities can stretch us to the breaking point. We can find ourselves accosted by a homeless person begging for money and we turn and walk away. Is it because we think that a few of our hard-earned dollars will be used to buy drugs or something else of which we do not approve? It is not our place to judge the motives of others. We should remember that while we were still sinners, Jesus died a horrendous death to expunge our sins.

The fact that Jesus loved us while we were sinners is but one witness to that kind of agape love. Throughout the gospels Jesus tells us what He expects of His followers. We are to love everyone, our friends and family but also those we find difficult to love – those who hurt us in some way, our enemies, those who offend us, sadden our hearts or cause hurt, or pain and sorrow. Those great commandments – love the Lord your God and your neighbor as yourself can be hard to follow. How can we possibly love the God we cannot see if we don't love those living around us whom we do see? We need to examine our lives under a magnifying glass and be brutally honest about the truth we may see there.

As I sat the other afternoon, a cup of hot tea warming my innards, I thought how easy it is to love and enjoy that feeling of warmth. I watched the geese flying overhead, honking their way from one water source to another. They seemed blissful as they cut their way through the azure sky. As I watched I wished that I had their ability to praise the Lord with that same reckless abandon. We need to find that freedom of praising God in all that we say and do. We can learn so much about love if we look with eyes of faith at the natural world. When we look at our world and its peoples through eyes that truly see, we can come to a deeper more profound understanding of what it is to love one another.

The tree in my front garden is in full leaf and the blossoms are fragrant welcoming me when I come in or open my windows. Let's learn something from the natural world and praise God with our lives, our words, and our joy and learn the freedom there is in loving God and our neighbors whether they are close or far away.

Wishing you a week of much awakening, agape and all those small miracles.

Betty Bruch
